of a world that is not so much ready made as continually on the brink of formation describing the ways landscapes are perpetually shaped by the engagements and practices of their inhabitants this innovative volume develops a processual approach to both perception and imagination but it also brings out the ways in which these processes animated by the hopes and dreams of inhabitants increasingly come into conflict with the strategies of external actors empowered to impose their own ready made designs upon the world with a focus on the temporal and kinaesthetic dynamics of imagining landscapes foregrounds both time and movement in understanding how past present and future are brought together in the creative world shaping endeavours of both inhabitants and scholars the book will appeal to anthropologists sociologists and archaeologists as well as to geographers historians and philosophers with interests in landscape and environment heritage and culture creativity perception and imagination
